

LONG FLAT

PINK MOSCATO

2009

Low-alcohol Moscato, made from the muscat grape (also known as frontignac for our older readers) has been a bit of a phenomenon of late. I like to think of it as the breakfast wine. Some examples tend to be a bit sweet and cloying for me but this has a nice streak of acid running through it, which helps balance the sweetness. It smells of peach and almond nougat and has fresh, clean flavours of tropical fruits; think mango and pineapple, as well as watermelon.

Food match: Blueberry pancakes

Rating: ★★★

The Weekly Review, Tastings\ Drink this

Ben Thomas, May 31, 2010